Financial strength is measured in many ways.

Industry ratings by independent agencies provide a method not only to analyze the financial strength of a company, but also to differentiate between various companies. Rating agencies assign ratings based on their evaluation of the financial condition of a company. These evaluations can be based on quantitative (measurable) and qualitative (traits and characteristics) factors or by using quantitative factors only.

The financial strength of a life insurance company is significant due to the long term promises associated with life insurance products.

The peace of mind associated with purchasing a product from a financially secure company is essential to our policyholders.

Southern Farm Bureau Life Insurance Company receives published ratings from three primary rating agencies. This publication includes those ratings, which are current.

A. M. Best

Southern Farm Bureau Life Insurance Company – Best’s Rating A+ (Superior)

This A+ (Superior) rating is assigned to companies that have, in the opinion of A. M. Best, “Superior” ability to meet their ongoing obligations to policyholders.

A. M. Best was incorporated in 1899 and became the first rating agency in the world that rated the financial condition of insurance companies. Best’s ratings are formally evaluated at least once every twelve months. Their analysts maintain contact with company management throughout the year and monitor the insurer’s performance on a six, nine, and twelve month basis. Best’s rating system evaluates factors affecting the overall performance of an insurance company to provide their opinion of the company’s financial strength, operating results and ability to meet obligations to the policyholders.
